Call On Navy Men For U.S. Shipping

WASHINGTON, (AP) -- The United States navy Monday called for volunteers among its inactive personnel for possible duty in the event the threatened maritime strike occurs June 15.

Navy Secretary Forrestal ordered all naval stations to recruit ex-servicemen "to meet the imminent critical situation."

President Truman said Friday he would use the navy, army and coast guard to keep the merchant fleet operating if necessary.

The navy order was announced just as C.I.O. maritime leaders and ship operators appeared to be giving ground a little in their bargaining over the length of the work-week for members of the national maritime union.

Earlier the Congress of Industrial Organizations had claimed growing support from the American Federation of Labor of the proposed strike.

Italy Splits Vote On King, Republic

ROME, (AP) -- First unofficial returns from Sunday's plebiscite showed mixed trends Tuesday with southern Italy apparently favoring retention of the monarchy and northern Italy the establishment of a republic.

The figures, too meagre to form a definite forecast, also gave an early lead to the middle-of-the-road Christian Democratic party in the constituent assembly.

Naples was reported to have cast 80 per cent of its vote for the monarchy.

Labor Men Vote To Back Strike

Edmonton Trades and Labor Council Monday night voted to support the strike of union printers in the Edmonton Bulletin and Edmonton Journal plants.

The move came after lengthy discussion and a rejection of a motion by Ald. Sydney Persons that a representative from the International Typographical union delegates be received as information and filed.

The union's case had been merely presented to the council and had not asked any specific aid.

Charles Gilbert, vice-president of the council read an I.T.U. statement, contending the strike was the result of assistance by the publisher of the Winnipeg Tribune to insert a clause in the working agreement with the printers making bylaws and regulations of the union subject to arbitration.

I.T.U. delegate Robert MacGraith said such an action was published Saturday, detailing correspondence between the publishers and the union which were "perfectly true."

We had signed a good agreement. All trades have local autonomy. But the International Union must insist on one thing, that the bylaws of our union must never go before arbitration.

He had given a $20 cheque to cover some losses. Later he is alleged to have told an employee he had not signed his name correctly, and asked the employee to make a correction.

Studholme is alleged to have thrust his hand inside his jacket pocket and ordered the employee to "stand back."

Give Loggers Two Days To Decide on Proposal

VANCOUVER, (CP) -- Final answer to Chief Justice Glavin's recommendations for settling the strike of 35,000 workers in the British Columbia lumber industry will be discussed by the full district council of the International Woodworkers union (C.I.O.) here Wednesday.

Harold Pritchett, union president, called the meeting after a request for a two-day extension of the acceptance or rejection deadline had been accepted by the chief justice. The deadline has been extended to 3:00 p.m., June 5.

Employers' representatives accepted the arbitrator's recommendations without reservation, saying they were prepared to agree to a 1946 master agreement. Operators said it would mean an additional cost of $11,500,000 to the lumber industry in this province.

Ex-M.L.A. Loses Taxation Case

OTTAWA, (CP) Decision by the Supreme Court of Canada Monday ruled travelling and living expenses of an Alberta legislature member were not exempt from taxation.

It was the case of James C. Mahaffy, former independent member of the provincial legislature for Calgary who had claimed $236 in travelling and living expenses for his $2,000 sessional indemnity in his 1941 federal income tax return.

A test case, the decision makes a final ruling on the matter of exemption from expenses incurred by parliamentarians in earning their indemnities.

In his 1941 return Mr. Mahaffy reported his allowance of $2,000 as part of his income, but deducted $236 expenses including travel, train berths and meals.

The Minister also said that the government was continuing to sponsor legislation for new uranium deposits, and results had been encouraging. It seemed likely that the only satisfactory sources would be in the North West Territories.

While high words were spoken about peace and happiness, one casual remark by Mr. Howe was far from peaceful:

Three pounds of the material in question would wipe the entire city of Ottawa off the map.

Chief Constable Ileg Jemmis stated Monday night four juveniles were being held by city police for questioning in connection with the death of Peter Walinski, 52, first great war prisoner who jumped to his death from Dacota bridge into the river Sunday night.

Meanwhile police said that the body of a man recovered from the river during the week-end had been identified as that of D. Wismer, 11034 89 ave. Think 600 Dead In Turkish Quake

ISTANBUL, (AP) The interior ministry said Monday night the known death toll in last Friday's earthquake in eastern Turkey had reached 390, but tales of horror only now beginning to trickle out of the stricken area indicated that more than 600 persons may have been crushed to death.

It was believed the full extent of the disaster might not be known for days.

Cites Red Plea

Canadian Cash

MONTREAL, (CP) -- Testimony that Col. Zabolin, former Russian military attaché and alleged head of an espionage ring in Canada, requested $50,000 from the Canadian government to assist in his escape, was given Monday by Igor Gouzenko, former spy, at the espionage trial of Fred Rose.

Gouzenko, former cipher clerk in the Russian embassy, said the request was made by way of a telegram to the chief of 1st military intelligence in Moscow.

Other documents introduced by the crown purported to show that Zabolin had been working on uranium in this country was sought by Russia in July, 1945; that an alleged agent "Kaiser," identified as an Alan Nunn Way, had advised Col. Zabolin that the atomic bomb was conducted in New Mexico, and that the bomb dropped on Japan was made out of uranium 235.

One message allegedly reported that "Kaiser" had contacted "short data" on an electric shell used by the American navy against Japanese suicide aircraft.

Edmonton Journal

Edmonton Bulletin

is published at 10005 101 st., Edmonton, Alberta, and at 9841-9842 Jasper Ave., Edmonton, Alberta, daily except Sunday, by the Southam Company, Limited, and Alberta Free Press, Limited, and by W. A. MacDonald and Charles E. Campbell, as publishers.

Authorized as second class matter by the Post Office Department, Ottawa.

Cannot Tolerate Arson

The seven years which a 24-year-old Edmonton father must spend in penitentiary express, in some degree at least, the abhorrence of the law and the community to the crime of arson. Had the "fire-bug" applied his torch just two hours later than he did, a score of men, women and children might easily have lost their lives.

The heinousness of the culprit's offense in this case, was heightened by the fact that he took no thought of the peril into which he was about to plunge the thirty-two residents of the apartment block. For all he knew, all of them might have been in their rooms and many of them might have been asleep. Yet, almost as though he were eager to make the fire a real threat to human life he started his incendiary blaze under the tailing of the back of the building.

The community will feel the deepest sympathy for the wife and the six young children. Unfortunately they must suffer for the sins of the husband and father. Perhaps this thought will abide with the guilty man as he serves out his punishment, and may help him to realize the terrible nature of his offense against society.

Community Centres

The past fifteen years have seen the development of a marked trend toward community organization for the provision of leisure-time activities. Alberta has shared in this movement. Not only have a considerable number of community halls been built, but many centres have been laying plans for at least discussing the launching of such projects.

In response to an ever-growing demand for information on community centres, Donald Cameron, of the University of Alberta, has published a comprehensive survey of what has been done and what should be attempted. The book is entitled "Community Centres in Alberta."

Two of Mr. Cameron's "pointers" are worth keeping in mind by those who are planning this form of community organization. One is that the rural resident is seldom as isolated as in pioneer days, and that therefore he is more and more attracted to the larger centre, with its diversified offerings, for business and pleasure.

The other is that "the most important thing about the centre is the people who are going to make it." This means that the community itself must be thoroughly studied and organized to ensure that the service it provides and, after provided, is consistently supported.

At the best the impression created that elaborate buildings are needed, Mr. Cameron makes a special reference to the community centre at Sangudo, 75 miles northwest of Edmonton. It ranks as one of the most successful in the province, yet its buildings are "considerably below average." Nevertheless, it includes an arts and crafts club, a skating rink, a girls' choir, a library, young peoples' activities, a motion picture section and a hobby fair. All its activities are enthusiastically supported by the whole community.

Mr. Cameron has packed his brochure with practical information on financing, architecture, and the scores of hints that should be most useful to any community planning to organize a social centre.

Sentences for Spies

Three of the persons involved in the Ottawa espionage case have now been tried, convicted and sentenced. The sentences imposed certainly have not erred on the side of severity.

The two women accused, Mrs. Wolkyn and Miss Wisker, have been sentenced to two and a half and three years respectively. Now a third defendant, Edward Mazerall, has received a four-year term. These are really remarkably lenient sentences when the nature of their offences is considered.

All three, it must be remembered, were government employees entrusted with information of a highly secret nature. They had taken a particularly solemn oath not to disclose to unauthorized persons any official secret which might come into their possession in the course of their duties.

Yet each of them, in violation of this oath, they proceeded to betray confidential military or diplomatic information to the agents of foreign power.

Such conduct is unquestionably, it gravely endangers the safety of the state, which is troubled at times like those of the last seven years depends very largely on the maintenance of proper secrecy in matters relating to the services.

The sentences contrast very strikingly with ten years penal servitude imposed by a British court on Dr. Alan Nunn May for a very similar offence.

Labor and Communism

The coming annual conference of the British Labor Party is certain to see a showdown on the question of relations with the Communist Party.

Rebuffed on many previous occasions, the Communists have been making an especially strong bid for affiliation with the official labor organization.

During the past few years they have infiltrated into some of the more important trade unions and have even been elected to union offices. As a result they have contrived to get some union support for their application to participate in the miners, always the most radical of British workers.

Another source of support is provided by those left-wing intellectuals who have always favored a "popular front" of all radical elements.

The "elder statesmen" of the Labor Party, however, led by such men as Prime Minister Attlee, and Ernest Bevin, resolved to oppose any attempt at affiliation "just as firmly as before. They appreciate quite clearly that their own program of democratic and gradual socialism is entirely incompatible with the Communist advocacy of violent revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

In addition, they deeply distrust the "Reds" as intrigues and troublemakers who, if once admitted inside the party would constantly scheme to seize control.

Beyond all this, intense distrust is felt for the Communist Party because of its Russian connections and the faithfulness with which it has followed the Moscow "line." This feeling has been intensified by recent friction between Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

At the coming conference conservative labor leaders will not rest content with defeating the affiliation resolutions. They will propose an amendment to the constitution of the party designed to exclude permanently the Communist Party or any other group which maintains its own separate organization and program. The decisive battle is likely to come over this amendment.

Most commentators are confident that the anti-Communist forces will win a complete victory, and that the "comrades" will be permanently barred.

This result will prove a death blow for the hopes of Communism in Britain. The movement has a very limited following and its one real hope of attaining power has always lain in "boring" and capturing the Labor Party.

The Third Column

Pandora's Box

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

WASHINGTON -- A corner of the curtain has been lifted from another of the horrors of our time -- biological warfare. It is vitally important to understand the basic facts of this problem, and they deserve to be set down in brief.

Biological weapons are more sinister although less dangerous than the atom bomb itself. Three types of weapons were developed. Type one consisted of violently virulent strains of human disease. No experiments were attempted on human beings but tests on animals led to the conclusion that these disease strains had the capability of decimating enemy populations, as soon as an infection was started. The most important strain was also the most germ which has a spore-phase in its life-cycle, making it easily transportable. German spores can live for great periods in the air or on the ground, without need of special cultures to nourish them, or apparatus to maintain them at a special temperature, in its spore phase, therefore it could be dropped by bomb or carried by secret agent, to start a plague among the enemy.

Type two consisted of virulent strains of plant and animal diseases, and of poisons noxious to plants. This weapon is the one used against Japan, in its poison form, if the surrender had not come so soon after the atomic bombing, the poison was considered sufficient to kill all the rice in an average rice field. It was also intended to confront the Japanese with the specter of starvation, by threatening to kill their rice crop by dropping these tablets from B-29's.

Type three consisted of poisons sufficiently concentrated for anti-personnel use on a massive scale. Presumably they would have been dropped into the water supply of enemy cities. It was also envisaged that the poison normally generated by the germ which causes botulism, which is reported to have been isolated and synthesized, belonged to this weapon type.

A moment's thought will show that these are new weapons of a revolutionary strategic significance similar to that of the atomic bomb. Of course, they will not destroy the enemy's productive potential as the bomb can and even as means of mass murder they are less absolute. But they put the same incalculable value upon military surprise, and they give far more value to under-handed treachery. The bomb, with its "tamping" to insure complete fission of atomic elements, would have been broken down and carried to its destination in small parts by its secret agents, and used in this way. But the biological weapons really are capable of being carried by an agent in a suitcase.

Worse still, control of the biological weapons is far less easy than control of atomic energy. The manufacture of fissionable material is an immense, complicated process, requiring enormous and costly installations. In contrast, a high authority has remarked that at least half of the biological weapons could be "produced in a brewery."

These facts only increase the responsibility which has been laid upon the Atomic Energy Commission of the United Nations to control the work at all, each participating nation must yield up some sovereignty.

Now if each participating nation sacrifices some sovereignty to a central body, that is a sort of beginning on which a truly workable and effective world organization may be built in process of time.

But the world has no effective international problems by peaceful means. In turn make it unnecessary for nations to rummage in the Pandora's Box of horrors which World War has opened. That, in brief, is the last hope of the American policy-makers.

A Deserving Cause

The Department of Veterans' Affairs has planned a nationwide campaign to acquaint employers with the technical skills acquired by ex-servicemen and women while in uniform. Also to urge that partially disabled persons -- veterans or others -- be given consideration when jobs are available which they can fill.

It is to be hoped the campaign will be carried on with tact and vigor, and that it will meet with success everywhere. There is a desire on the part of employers in general to give veterans a chance of employment. It may not be so generally understood how far service training has qualified and fitted into civilian occupations. The more widely and more clearly this understanding can be made, the better.

And there are many jobs which men can fill who have lost an arm or a leg, or whose disabilities are an accident. Because there are many things they cannot do, they should get priority where they can be of use for which they are otherwise qualified and from which they are not deterred by their disabilities.

Both these classes of citizens deserve the best opportunities that can be given them to obtain employment. The department is doing good service in calling attention to their claims.

The Nurse Shortage

Because the shortage of trained hospital nurses has become so acute, Dr. Harvey Agnew, secretary of the Canadian Nurses' Association, has warned the country that an epidemic of disease at the present time could lead to a national calamity.

This warning recalls the survey of nursing education in Canada on which a report was made in 1932 by the Hon. George M. Weir on the authority of the Canadian Medical and Canadian Nurses' Associations. This report held that the services of nurses should be made available to the people under a publicly financed system. The report stated:

According to medical evidence, five out of eight of those sufficiently ill to need the services of the trained nurse now cared for in the home by untrained attendants. One out of every 10 of the population, or practically 1,000,000 persons, need hospital care annually, but general hospitals accommodate approximately 740,000 people, leaving 260,000 who need hospital care to be treated in their homes. There is an intermediate section of the laity which is semi-sick, sufferers from rheumatism, various teeth, bad tonsils, stomach trouble, and so forth. From 50 to 60 per cent. of the rural and industrial population in many sections of Canada belong to this intermediate class.

The survey further discovered that about one out of fifty, or nearly 200,000 people in Canada, are ill on any given day with diseases that would have been prevented or treated in time. Many people, however, did not receive treatment in time, with fatal results in many cases. The great problem, the report declared, was how to apply nursing skill to all who required it.

What was true in 1932 is trebly true in 1946, for the nursing shortage is at least as acute and as serious now as it was then. The plain fact is that private and municipal hospitals are no longer able to make the profession of nursing sufficiently attractive to a sufficiently large number of capable women.

The Weir report recommended a national plan for improving nursing training, supervision, placement, superannuation, and for the protection of their professional standards and honorific security. In short, it was shown that nursing must be adopted as a prime national problem.

A reconsideration of this report by the federal government now might throw some light on the present emergency.

BEST OF ALL

From the Guelph Mercury. It's nice to meet people you can trust--but nicer when they pay cash.

Three In A Row

Fire--the other day destroyed a warehouse at New Westminster where men were experimenting with the prospect of success in the extraction of oil from the McMurray tar sands. Five years ago the plant of the Alberta Sand Company at McMurray was destroyed by fire after it had been operating for a few months. A year ago the rebuilt plant was destroyed by fire a few weeks before operations were due to start.

Maybe this record of fires indicates nothing more than repetitive coincidence. But somebody should make it his particular business to find out if that is the explanation. There is a fabulous amount of oil in those tar sands, the commercial extraction of which would create a great industry--and have far-reaching effects upon the whole production business in Canada. The stake is too valuable to ignore the possibility that these curiously timed fires didn't just "happen."

In Good Hands

A London paper quotes British scientists as saying that American experts have contrived a highly efficient weapon with which to distribute disease germs over an enemy army or enemy territory, and which ranks as a potentially more terrifying than the atom bomb.

If the report is true, the terror-provoking powers of the weapon hardly need emphasis or elaboration. No kind of explosive could send fear into the hearts of a people so surely as the knowledge that germs were being showered upon them. Bombs hit fewer people than they miss. But a person could count himself secure against infectious disease spread and fed by a daily deluge of germs.

One may now expect an outbreak of pointless lamentations from those who can think of nothing but that "the world" should stop devising weapons and devote its energies to the promotion of human happiness. It should. But it isn't doing that. And it won't do to forget that it isn't. If the report is correct, this germ-distributor need not give concern to any person whose aims are peaceful. It is an instrument in the hands of a people who can be trusted to use it only for purposes of national defense or for the enforcement of international law. In such hands, the more powerful the weapon the greater will be the security of peace-loving, law-abiding peoples.

Two messengers from the hairy Alnus of Hokkaido Island called on Emperor Hirohito to tell him they wanted the land which one of his revered ancestors had taken from them 100,000 acres of it. They did not see the emperor, but were allowed to leave notes with his secretary saying what they wanted. That probably ends the matter. They should have come to see General MacArthur.

Under a new trade agreement Russia is to buy Iceland's fish catch for the year, paying for it mainly with coal and timber. Recalling deals made with countries in eastern Europe and with Iran, observers in Washington are wondering if there isn't something else fishy about the deal. As Russia is paying 30 to 50 per cent more for the fish than they are worth, the direct inference is that the food situation is bad in the Soviet states. This inference is stronger because Russia fronts on two oceans and three seas and has a very extensive fishing industry of its own.

Marshal Tito, visiting Moscow, told Premier Stalin he considers Russia to be the best friend of Yugoslavia. Gratitude has been described as "lively sense of duty to come." The Marshal wants Trieste, and wants Russia's help to get it. That may amount to more than a gushing appreciation of Russian help in the past, and is hinted under-valuation of aid in the country. It got from other quarters long before Russian forces were strong enough to interfere with the Nazi invaders.

GUY IN THE MIDDLE

T. R. Richards in Toronto Telegram.

It is predicted that incomes and excess profits may both escape taxation in the next fiscal year. But the middle will pay and pay. If time somebody did something for the little guy in the middle. He isn't rich enough for high expenses not to hurt and he isn't poor enough to share in the free service provided for the poor. A GOOD DINNER

Lord Halifax in Collier's. I was given an excellent dinner by a club in a city of the Middle West. Afterwards the members asked me questions about the war, as well as I could, to answer them. When we came out, a secretary overheard the following conversation between the members. The first said, "It has been fine having the British ambassador here, and I hope he will come more often." My secretary picked up his ears for the answer, thinking he was about to hear some comment on my recent performance. What he did hear was, "Yes, we haven't seen a steak like this in the club for two years."

LIFT THE MARGARINE BAN

Brantford Expositor. With seemingly pointless obstinacy, while maintaining an irritating silence in controversy, the federal government persists in barring both the importation and the manufacture of margarine. This policy, having regard to the serious shortage of butter, is irrational. Of course it is. It is arguments against margarine, among them those advanced by people interested in the production of butter. The latter are entitled to claim that butter is superior to margarine, and to extol its merits without restriction. But by what right do they demand, particularly in this time of scarcity, a monopoly of the butter market, as good as it is it will be able to hold its own against any inferior substitute.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I have been asked to take a girl, 15 years old into our home. She has a father and a stepmother who are divorced, and when her home was broken up she was told to get out and take care of herself. Since then she has been staying with a relative, but conditions have not been favorable and she has to find another place to live. Her reputation is being tainted by malicious gossip. I don't believe the talk, but I do not know her habits well enough not to have my doubts. We haven't any children and we live in the country, and the question is would she be satisfied with us after living in town all her life and being more or less on her own?

This girl isn't our responsibility, but I feel sorry for her. Do you think we would risk too much by taking her in our home?

M.G.M.

ANSWER: I do not think that anyone can do a finer, nobler, more unselfish thing than to take a poor little waif, such as this girl is, into their home. Evidently she has never known what it was to have any love, or understanding, or sympathy. She has been battered and kicked around like a stray cat all her life. But if you look the matter over...

Men and Women of Canada

To your country and mine, a hungry world looks for help. As always, Canada is doing her full share. The advertisement below is one of a series which appeared throughout the United States to encourage all Americans to do their full share in preserving the hard-won peace.

John H. Hines
President, H. J. Hines Company

Why must we help feed Europe?

WE HAVE just won the first battle of Europe. We are fighting the second—and the enemy is famine. Time is running out. Already for millions of Europeans it is very late. If we lose this second battle, we have wasted our victory in the first.

The American tradition of common decency and human kindness demands that we help feed Europe. It is this tradition that has given us one of our greatest assets, "a reservoir of good will throughout the world."

There can be no permanent prosperity in America while hunger and despair stalk Europe. Our future international trade demands a healthy and productive Europe which only a well-fed and energetic people can create.

The future peace and stability of America and the entire world demand that we share our food. In the words of Lord Halifax, "Hunger and discontent are a poor foundation for the peaceful and prosperous world we are trying to build." Hunger provokes despair. Despair provokes hate. Hate makes war. In no better way can America's moral, spiritual and material might be used than to restore peace of mind to a despairing world. It is time to display the strength of democracy in peace.

Our reputation as a great and decent nation, our future prosperity, our future security are at stake.

What can each one of us do? Individually we can do little; collectively we can do a lot. If every single American follows the suggestions of the Famine Emergency Relief Committee below, we will soon save much of the food needed for Europe. If each of us writes his Congressman asking that he do all in his power to see that the food we have promised is shipped quickly, it will arrive in time to win the second battle. America has promised to deliver by July first, 6,000,000 tons of wheat, 1,000,000,000 pounds of meat and 375,000 tons of fats and oils.

This is our pledge. We must keep the faith.

John H. Hines
President, H. J. Hines Company

Here is what you can do to save vitally needed food:

- Never waste bread. Make three loaves do the work of five.
- Serve potatoes more often. Try potato pancakes, potato soup and potato salad.
- Substitute fruits and other desserts for cakes and pastry.
- Serve oatmeal often. One serving equals two slices of bread in food value.
- Serve open-face sandwiches and pies.
- Use less wheat cereals and other wheat products.
- Save and re-use fats and oils.
- Serve fewer fried foods.
- Salvage all fats that can't be re-used and turn them in to your butcher or grocer.
- Use fewer oil dressings—more boiled dressings for salads.
